Ramblings – My Friend Bobby Lee

On Tuesday, 3 September 1969, the first day of my first and only job since college graduation, I walked into the work place and met Bobby Lee. Bobby Lee was one year younger than my brother, and became my mentor, although that term wasn't in use at that time. Bobby Lee grew up in Talladega, Alabama, and lived on the wrong side of the tracks, as they sometimes say down south. Luckily, he joined the Navy, and escaped town before getting involved in a life that could have been much different. It seems that ole Bobby Lee decided he wanted to join the Navy when he was 16. When Bobby Lee walked into the local recruitment office, the officer asked him how old he was. So Bobby Lee told him he was 16. The officer reprimanded him and told him he couldn't join until he was 17, then sent him out the door with the admonition to "return in 5 minutes". When Bobby Lee returned in 5 minutes, the recruiting officer again asked him his age. This time, Bobby Lee stated "17 years old." "Welcome to the Navy," said the recruiting officer.

Now, one of Bobby Lee's assignments was to Brunswick, Georgia, where he was placed on a burial detail (you know, attending funerals as a Navy representative). One of the funerals he attended along with another sailor was near Ludowici, Georgia. For the uninitiated, Ludowici, was once known as the speed trap of Georgia. Then Governor Lester Maddox went so far as to erect signs on Highway 301 warning travelers of speed traps and clip joints in Ludowici. Anyhow, Bobby Lee and his fellow sailor stopped at a pool hall outside of town to get a beer after the funeral. Some local yahoo started mouthing off about the Navy, and a fight ensued. Sure enough, the sheriff was called, and Bobby Lee and fellow sailor were escorted outside, where the sheriff told them to follow him to the local jail.

On the way to jail, Bobby Lee began dropping further back from the sheriff's car, and when he thought he was far enough back, he whipped onto a dirt road and floored it. After going a couple of miles, they pulled over and looked for the sheriff's car, and not seeing it, settled down and started smoking cigarettes. Shortly thereafter, it got dark, and they decided to ease back to the main road and hightail it out of town. But at the main road sat the sheriff's car, along with a deputy's car, blocking the dirt road. So Bobby Lee and fellow sailor got out of their car and approached the sheriff. The sheriff told them that he knew they would be back since they were on a dead end road. He then pointed out a 12-gauge pump laying on the deck lid, and told them if they wanted to run some more, they better be able to outrun some 12-gauge buckshot. Needless to say, Bobby Lee followed all the way to the jail this time. After some haranguing, the sheriff asked the two of them how much money they had, and the response was 7 dollars and change. The sheriff then told them that they were lucky, because that was the exact fine for their offenses.

Now Bobby Lee and I worked together for 26 years until his retirement in 1996, and shared a lot of stories. His daughter even baby sat my daughter one summer. Some of you know I own an '01 Bullitt, so about 3 years ago, I decided to go to Tulsa, Oklahoma, for a Bullitt Nationals gathering. I mentioned that to Bobby Lee, and he said he would like to go with me. So off we went. The funniest(?) thing that happened occurred when we decided to pull off I-40 in Forrest City, Arkansas, to get something to eat and get gas (but not necessarily in that order and the latter wasn't meant to be the result of the former). Anyhow, just before stopping, I had mentioned to Bobby Lee that I had been corresponding with a fellow Bullitt owner in the U.K., who goes by the name of English Bob (yeah, he's an English bobbie), and we would probably run into him at the Nationals. After gassing the car, we pulled into a diner parking lot next door. Before we could get stopped, a guy comes running out of the diner with a camera, wanting a photo of the car and us. And he had an English accent. So there in the middle of nowhere in the U.S. on a Wednesday, at approximately 11:45 AM CDT, we met English Bob. Now in a country of 3.79 million square miles, I ask you, what would be the odds of that happening?

Ole Bobby Lee has since bought a Mustang, but I can't necessarily claim that that trip caused him to do so. But it never hurts to share memories, stories, and friendships over something as mundane as a car you both like.

“The Other” Newsletter Editor

Larry Prescott is the co-newsletter editor with me. Here is his bio. Billy

I've been a club member for less than a year which is crazy 'cause I've had seven Mustangs since my first '65 coupe when I was 16. Fortunately, my high school sweetheart became my wife and has tolerated my passion for Mustangs. She even got me my 2005 convertible for my 40th and let me trade-up my '65 coupe for my '65 convertible last year. Going to the 45th anniversary at Barber Motorsports last year with my son took me back to high school and lead to his graduation gift, a '01 convertible. Hope to see you at the Mazzy's Mustang Birthday Bash, I'll be there with my "beater".

Removing Rusted Bolts

Evidently there was a study done by Machinist's Workshop magazine in their April 2007 issue. The story looked at the different penetrating oils to see which one did the best job of removing a rusted bolt by measuring the torque required to loosen the bolt once treated. If the study was scientifically accurate, it turns out a home brew works best! Here's the summary of the test results:

Penetrating oil Average load

None 516 pounds
 WD-40 238 pounds
 PB Blaster 214 pounds
 Liquid Wrench 127 pounds
 Kano Kroil 106 pounds
 ATF-Acetone mix.....53 pounds

ATF is an abbreviation for automatic transmission fluid.

[Ed note: the article did not state if the test results were in inch-pounds or foot-pounds. It is suspected that they were probably inch-pounds.]

Like the looks of the '69 GT 500 Mustang, but want the performance of the 2010 Shelby? Then, be the first on your block to have your late model converted:

You know you love to drive that Mustang, and one of the reasons is the sound it produces. But if you have to drive that econobox during the week to conserve gas, you don't have to forego all the pleasantries of the Mustang. Just order up one of these for that econobox.

GRMC Events

Saturday, April 17, Mustang Birthday Bash

Team Ford and Mazzy's (Marietta) have both signed on as sponsors for this April 17 event. April 17 is the date of the original Mustang introduction in 1964. This will be a popular vote show limited to 75 cars, with registration from 9 – 11 am, voting from 11 – 3, and trophies at 4 pm. Team Ford will be doing the ride and drive as like last year, plus a Friday Dynojet day at their dealership in Marietta, and donating prizes. Mazzy's is giving up their whole facility, providing a childrens' area in the lower lot, complete with inflatable jumping gym, and prizes. There will be carnival games (bean bag toss, dunking for prizes, pin the gas cap on the Mustang, spark plug change) for prizes, party favors, cup cakes, a horse (pony?) race, and a silent auction. Sounds like a lot, but how many times do you give a party for your favorite car? If everyone ponies up soliciting spiff, everyone should leave with their trunks full. We'll need the whole club out there pulling this wagon.

We have an ad in the Mustang Times. Proceeds will once again go to Atlanta Children's Hospice. With the funds provided by Mazzy's and Team Ford, we should be able to give a lot to the kids. See flyer at the end of this newsletter for details.

~Lee Mathias

Also, Anne Martin requests donations for the silent auction fund raiser at the Mazzy show. An enthusiastic response is hoped for. Donations can be dropped off at the back of Mazzy's. or brought to the pre-car show meeting on the 11th (refer to website for details). All volunteers are requested to attend this meeting.

This is not a race; you simply try to improve your driving skills with a limited number of drivers on the track at any one time. Registration required. 35 spots available. See flyer at the end of this newsletter for details. Participants and volunteers are always needed and welcome. See flyer at the end of this newsletter for details.
